

Dr Terry Quinn holds a post of senior clinical lecturer and honorary consultant physician with University of Glasgow,

He is funded by the Stroke Association and Chief Scientist Office.

His principal research interest are around clinical trial methodology; functional and cognitive assessment.

He has authored original research; reviews; book chapters and guidelines around stroke and cognitive assessment.

He holds editorial positions with various journals including Stroke and PLOS.

He is a contact editor for the Cochrane Dementia and Cognitive Improvement Group and member of the recently formed NIHR complex reviews support unit.

As well as his research portfolio, Dr Quinn continues clinical practice in the stroke units of Glasgow.