

Vincent Soriano, MD PhD

Vincent Soriano, MD, PhD, received his medical degree from the Autonomous University of Barcelona, where he subsequently conducted specialty training in internal medicine. After completing post doctoral work at the Food and Drug Administration (United States), he returned to Spain and joined the Department of Infectious Diseases at Hospital Carlos III in Madrid, where he has been the Assistant Director since 1999. His expertise has focused mainly on viral infections, specifically HIV and viral hepatitis. Dr. Soriano is the editor-in-chief of AIDS Reviews, an international, peer-reviewed journal focused on HIV research (impact factor 4.6). His team has produced more than 900 publications in international journals and currently is ranked within the top ten worldwide in terms of impact factor in scientific publications in the field of HIV infection (www.aidsivresearch.com). Chair of the International Hepatitis & HIV Coinfection Panel, Dr. Soriano is assisting the National AIDS Program in Spain and is the editor of Manual del SIDA, a reference textbook of HIV/AIDS for Spanish-speaking countries.